On the City Council's agenda tonight, Councilman Scott Blair introduced a measure that would have stifled capital projects in 2016. The ordinance, A-16-01, was defeated. As a result, capital improvements will move forward in 2016 as planned and budgeted.

The administration will be introducing capital improvement projects for a number of categories, including façade improvements, historic preservation, pedestrian and bicycle safety, wildlife and environment preservation, city beautification, and public art in work sessions in the coming months.

“Many thanks to the City Council, particularly 3 of the new members, for their commitment to improving the City of New Albany and our aging infrastructure,” stated Mayor Jeff Gahan.
